No Mystery

There's no mystery in good paint making. It's only "cheap" and inferior paint that surrounds itself with secrecy and mystery.

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT

is not a "patent" or "chemical" paint. There's no secret or mystery about it. It's a pure lead, pure zinc, and pure linseed oil paint. It's better than other paints made from the same materials, because the methods and manufacturing facilities of its makers are better—not because they have any patent or secret scheme.

United States Liberty Loan of 1917

Our Country Needs Our Money

Shall We Not Respond Promptly, Cheerfully, Liberally?

War requires men. War requires money. The young men of the nation will be quick to respond in great numbers. If they are prepared to give themselves, shall we be less prompt to offer our money, which will be needed in great sums to provide for their proper equipment and maintenance, for fleets of ships and aeroplanes and for guns for coast defense?

We must mobilize our dollars to help our men and our Allies win a great and permanent victory for civilization. This is a duty we cannot evade and would not, if we could.

The Most Effective Way to Give This Help is to Buy Bonds of the New War Loan.

Our Government has asked The Bank of Campbell to receive your subscription. The following have responded liberally, promptly, cheerfully.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith accompanied Mrs. Fawcett to San Francisco and there join the State Press. Association in its visit to Yosemite. During the absence of Ye Editor and wife, the Press Office will be in charge of Mr. Lisle Keesling and any courtesies extended him in the way of news items would be greatly appreciated both by him and ye owner.

At the regular meeting of the local Masons Monday evening, the Master and Wardens were authorized to subscribe to the 1917 Liberty Loan for $400 in bonds. This is the first subscription for this cause made by a local lodge. Many of the societies thruout the country are making this patriotic move.

Big Show Coming

Preparations are well under way for the coming firemen's show. The Glee Club which will give several numbers is consistently drilling under the masterful direction of Mr. Jan Kalas. The principals in some of the stunts are already working up their parts and everything points to the best show ever given by the boys. The dates of this big doings are June 8 and 9.

Mother's Day Porgram

Sunday evening, Mother's Day was observed at the Congregational church with a varied program of numbers bearing upon that subject.

There had been so many expressions of appreciation of the Easter night service, that a similar one was planned, in which the children had a prominent part.

The program, as given, follows:

Farewell Reception

The ladies of the Congregational church enjoyed a social afternoon Thursday last in honor of Mrs. C. T. Fawcett who leaves today for the East. The parlors were beautiful with bowls of roses, several bouquets being gifts to the guest of honor.

After sometime spent in general conversation, the company enjoyed a number of selections on the Victrola. Mrs. W. I. Merrill read a humorous selection, "A Demonstration Supper", and Mrs. A. I. Cramer, accompanied by Miss Arnott, sang two pretty solos.

After a few words of prayer offered by Mrs. Calista Atkinson, dainty refreshments of cake and lemonade were served and good-byes were said to the strains of "Aloha."

Annual Meeting Country Woman's Club

At the annual meeting of the Country Woman's Club, Monday afternoon the following directors were chosen, Mrs. J. F. Duncan and Mrs. L. F. Shaw, re-elected, Mrs. J. C. Ainsley, Mrs. Geo. Page, and Miss Mary Lewis, elected.

The club voted to participate in the Red Cross work, in conjunction with the San Jose Chapter, and to take out a membership that will entitle the club to the Red Cross Magazine, which will be placed on the Reading Room tables.

The balance in the treasury at the close of 1916 was voted into the building fund.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed that the club has had a successful year along all lines for which it was organized.

Goodwill Industries

Much local interest was aroused in the work of the "Goodwill Industries" as explained by the Rev. S. Quickmire at the M. E. church Sunday evening. Every thing, except tin cans is useable, he explained. All clothing, junk and discarded articles of every sort are repaired, which provides work for many, and the renovated materials are then sold at a pittance to the poor. Any desiring to help can give their names in for a "good-will bag" to be mailed them, in which to enclose contributions.

Mr. J. F. Duncan and daughter, Miss Marion, went to Sacramento Wednesday to attend the annual meeting of the State Bankers Association and enjoy the attendant festivities. They will stop at Ripon on their return for a visit with Miss Alice Duncan.

Here Are Some Things that Are Still Reasonable in Price

Canned Oysters—Metropolitan Brand. These grade extra large about twenty-four to thirty oysters in a can. Although the wholesale price is up, we are still selling this fine brand at 15c a can.

Canned Oysters—"Better Buy" Brand. These are also fine oysters, but they are not so large as the Metropolitan Brand. This grade is a bargain at 2 cans for 25c.

Pettijohn's Breakfast Food—The price of this cereal has advanced to 20c, but we are going to close out what is on hand at the old price of 15c. This is a bargain — don't miss it.

H. O. Oats are still selling at 15c a package.

Blaine's Steel Cut Coffee has not advanced. Remember, it is steel cut, and all the chaff has been removed. There isn't a better 30c coffee on the market.

Grape Fruit—Here is a box of extra large and juicy fruit. You would have to pay 60c a dozen any where else, for this size and quality. Our price is 50c a dozen—it's a bargain.

Cluff Brand Tunna—This fish is entirely off the wholesale market—nearly every other store has raised the price—for a limited time only we will sell at the old figures of 10c, 15c, 25c.

HONESTY THE RULE

SO SAYS MANAGER OF NICKEL-IN-SLOT RESTAURANT.

Most People Refuse to Cheat the Place When They Get the Chance, But One Obtained Extra Coffee.

If there is any place where it would be supposed the chances for cheating had been reduced to a minimum it is the restaurant where you drop a nickel in the slot and buy your dinner in the same way that you get a stick of gum on a subway platform. But according to the manager of one of these places customers can get more than they are entitled to under certain conditions.

"See that fellow over there?" he said. "He's a beat. Watch him. He puts his cup under the coffee spout and then walks to the furthest corner to get a knife, fork and spoon. Why? because there's always a little trickle running from the spout, and by the time he comes back he's got two spoonfuls of coffee in his cup before he even puts in his nickel.

"Result: he gets his cup filled up right to the brim instead of up to within half an inch. Sometimes he even has a little overflow in his saucer. His theory is that every little bit added to what you pay for makes just a little bit more.

"But you'd be surprised at the number of honest people there are. The other night a man came up to me.

"'I want to get a piece of custard pie,' he says, 'and every one of the doors is wide open. I can get all the pie I want, but I can't drop my nickel in.'

"Sure enough, the boy who fills the pie shelves had failed to close the doors tight enough to lock them. Every compartment was wide open. And every one was filled; no pie missing at all. I had the locks sprung, and then this man put in his coin, turned the handle and took his piece of pie in the regular way.

"But the best little Diogenes of them all was a fellow I saw this very night. He comes up to me with a plate of macaroni in one hand and a nickel in the other.

"'Here's a jitney belongs to you,' he tells me. 'I put it in the slot and got my dish, but the jit fell out the return slot again. What'll I do with it?'

"They don't come any honester than that, I guess."

MAKES HOUSE OUT OF STRAW

Colorado Ranchman Builds Six-Room Residence at a Cost of $270, Exclusive of Labor.

Bricks without straw are bad, proverbially, but a house made of straw without bricks might seem worse than one made of bricks without straw. Nevertheless, a Colorado ranchman has built a six-room residence of straw, at a cost of $270, exclusive of labor, and finds it warmer in winter and cooler in summer than an old-fashioned log house or a modern brick or concrete house.

The straw for this residence was baled. The bales were laid as if they were bricks or blocks of stone. Wall building with large and easily handled units proved easy work compared with handling large blocks of stone and very fast work compared with brick laying. The walls were coated with cement inside and out. Pebbles were added to the final outside coat. The house presents the appearance of pebble-covered concrete. It has plenty of windows and is well lighted and ventilated. Popular Mechanics Magazine, which tells the tale of this unusual house, predicts that it will last a long time and prove exceptionally comfortable in extreme of winter and summer weather.

Unquestionably.

In San Francisco there was a prominent lawyer who prided himself on his astuteness in questioning Chinese witnesses. He was very nearsighted, so failed to note that the dress of a Chinese witness was of finer texture than worn by an ordinary coolie.

Instead of asking the usual questions as to age, occupation, etc., the following dialogue ensued:

Q.—What is your name?

A.—Sell Lung.

Q.—Do you live in San Francisco?

A.—Yes.

Q.—You sabe God?

A.—Mr. Attorney, if you mean do I understand the entity of our Creator, I will simply reply that on Thursday evening next I shall address the State Ministerial association upon the subject of the Divinity of Christ, and shall be pleased if you will attend.

To the day of his death the celebrated lawyer will never escape the question: "Do you sabe God?"—Case and Comment.

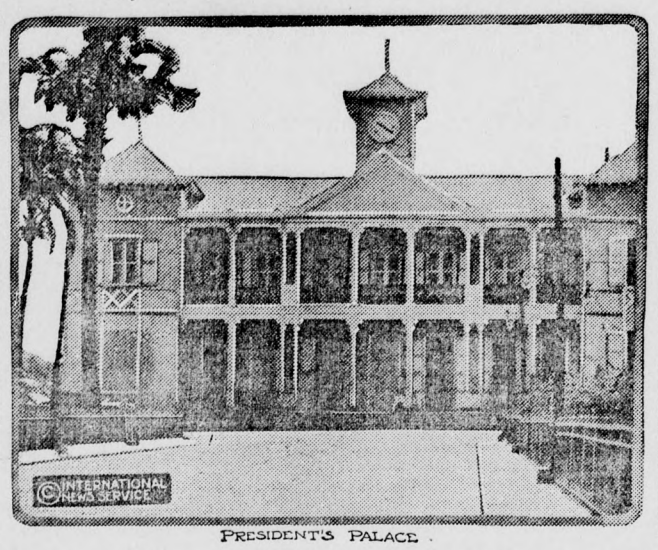
With Americans in Haiti



PRESIDENT'S PALACE

THIS IS the tale as it was told by M. le Capitaine Stack of the Gendarmerie d'Haiti, second lieutenant, U. S. M. C., concerning le cheval noir, un bete fameux ou infame, according to the point of view, which he did not ride at the grand review in honor of the flotte de guerre americaine. His language was a mixture of United States, table-d'hote French, and Creole, with which last-named dialect I am less familiar than I could wish, this being my first visit to Haiti, but it was eloquent with grief, and moved a sympathetic audience almost to tears.

Some four hundred feet up the side of a mountain to the south and east of Port au Prince, M. le President Simon, of fragrant memory, had builded himself a country house, and had planted about it citrus fruits, coconuts, tamarinds, pomegranates, oleanders, roses, ferns, and flowering shrubs and vines of great and varied beauty; and on the broad piazza was a merry company, sipping, since your curiosity must be completely satisfied, limonade ayec un 'tick, and admiring the wonderful sight in the harbor, for every ship was a blaze of light, and two-score of searchlights were dancing ragtime in the skies. Capitaine Stack alone was depressed, and refused to be comforted by kind words and innocent beverage. He was a profoundly disappointed man. He seemed to place the blame on Louis, his orderly, but on his departure we resolved ourselves into a committee of the whole, and absolved Louis of all responsibility, holding, however, that all rope-makers selling their wares in this island should be compelled to denaturize their material.

Beguiled by Louis' Smiles.

"Je ne comprendre pas," said Capitaine Stack, "why I selected Louis as my orderly except that he is a beau garcon, always smiling, and smiles were at a premium about that time, while now the rate of exchange is on a fixed basis like the currency—five gourdes to the dollar. One day, while he was busy pottering about the camp doing nothing, I called him over and said: 'Louis, you my orderly, savvie?' 'Parfaitement, mon Capitaine,' he replied, 'merci beaucoup,' and that was the last I saw of him for several days. I got rather accustomed to doing for myself out West many years ago, and I managed the best I could, but I really intended to speak severely to Louis when he returned. He came in smiling, and I hadn't the heart to do it. 'Me go find un fine gros chien for watch dog,' Louis explained, and while I didn't see what use a watch dog would be in camp, and there was nothing about the animal to prepossess one in his favor, I accepted the dog and the explanation for what they were worth, and told Louis to rub down my horse.

"'Ver' mal cheval,' said Louis next morning, after chow. 'No suit mon Capitaine. Me connais cheval noir, magnifique bete pour la militaire. Me go get.' Fact is, my mount was a sorry-looking wretch, although the best I could get for the allowance made by headquarters, and having a little money ahead, I was willing to invest in something that would look decent in town. This time Louis was gone nearly a week, but when he did turn up, he had with him a good black horse, not broken to the saddle, and showing too much of his ribs, but I've seen many a good animal built up by sound food and decent treatment, and I was willing to take a chance. (Non, madame, Louis didn't have a bill of sale for the horse, but I didn't think to ask him any questions.) With all his faults, Louis is honest. At least he has never taken anything of mine without asking, except perhaps tobacco, or a handkerchief, or socks, or something like that. And always he returned the dry goods, having first sent it to the wash.

Lively Night in the Corral.

"Revenir a mon mouton—I mean my cheval noir—I told Louis to see that he had enough to eat, to turn him loose in the corral, and to give him a good rubbing next morning, and to see that he was fattened up a bit before we tried him with the saddle. That night I couldn't sleep a wink. Every time I got into a doze there would be an outbreak of some kind among the horses, and next morning I found that mon cheval noir had undertaken to kick every other horse in the squad, and was carrying this resolution into effect in the most business-like way. I told Louis we couldn't have anything like that, and not to let the horse out of the corral at all that day, and to make sure that he was tied up at night so he couldn't get at the other horses. Louis said he understood, but there was another rumpus that night. Louis said he couldn't find a rope to tie up the black horse, and that he had borrowed a halter, but the halter failed to hold. Next night I had the other horses tethered outside the corral, and gave my cheval noir solitary confinement.

"After a good night's sleep, I called Louis, and said to him very sternly: 'Listen! Find a cord pour my cheval noir, vite—and if you can't buy it, commandeer it, promptement—allez.' Louis disappeared, and I did not see him for a day and a half, and he came in just as we were breaking camp, smiling as usual, and much elated at his success. He had une belle blanche corde for which he said he had paid seven gourdes, and I gladly gave him the money. I could fancy myself the best mounted marine officer in Port au Prince, and I could almost hear a gentle voice whispering in my ear: 'Etes-vous aussi doux que votre cheval, monsieur?'

Final Tragedy.

"That night we camped in the bush, hoping to make Petionville in the course of the morning, and to arrive in Port au Prince the following day by an easy march, and in the pink of condition. Unfortunately the commissary broke down, and I was so hungry that only the recollection of having captured two stray pullets far away from any signs of habitation sustained me. Calling Louis, I gave orders that the pullets be broiled and served at once. Louis soon returned, this time not smiling. I wasn't smiling either by this time. In fact I was almost cross. I could see that he brought bad news, but I was not prepared for this shocking statement: 'Helas, M. le Capitaine! Votre chien, 'e 'ave eaten les poulets.' If you will believe me, I had forgotten the existence of that d—— dog, and I hope you will pardon my way of putting it.

"Next morning I decided to saddle my charger, and put him through his gaits, preparatory to a triumphant entree dans le capital. I called for Louis, but Louis was nowhere to be found. I looked for the horse. It had disappeared. I sent a corporal to fetch in Louis. Presently he came. I demanded of him my horse. Louis was not smiling; he was almost in tears. The horse had decamped. 'Did I not pay you seven gourdes for une belle blanche corde to fasten the horse?' I demanded of him. 'And did I not order you to tie him securely?' 'Oui, oui, M. le Capitaine,' dit Louis, 'mais le cheval noir, 'e 'ave eaten la corde!'"

We looked out over the city, as M. le Capitaine finished his story. The lights on the fleet, save those burning as signals, were out. Port au Prince was silent, asleep. Above us was all the glory of a tropical sky at night, with its myriad of worlds, doubtless as full of joy and sorrow as our own, but nowhere could we find consolation for Capitaine Stack.

Queer Foods.

The women of Turkish harems, for the purpose of attaining that plumpness which is an essential of beauty from an Oriental point of view, eat large quantities of the "meal worms," which are the offspring of a small beetle. Of course, they are appetizingly prepared.

In Paraguay a large ant, rolled in sirup and baked, is eaten by women much in the same way as caramels are eaten in this country. White ants are a considerable article of commerce in the Levant. Prepared with sugar, they are sold in the markets of Constantinople and are esteemed for their aromatic and acid flavors.

The Swedes use ants to give a peculiar and piquant flavor to their native whisky. The distillers' rule is that not more than five shall be utilized per quart, inasmuch as more are irritating to the throat.

HAS UNIQUE PLANT

South Carolina Man Has Established Grasshopper Cannery.

Has Perfected Several Processes for Preparation of Meat for Human Consumption.

Douglas J. Mulloy of Fairbanks, S. C., has recently enlarged his grasshopper cannery to several times its original size to accommodate the increased number of orders received for his manufactured product. Hitherto Mulloy has made a meager living by catching grasshoppers, pickling them in alcohol, and shipping them in ordinary quantities to high-school laboratories where they are used for dissection in biology classes. But recently Mulloy received a letter from a man in New York city—a Syrian, by the way—asking him if he could ship canned grasshoppers in quantities, cooked merely—not preserved in alcohol. Mulloy replied that he could, and soon all the small boys in Fairbanks were out with nets and the grasshopper population of the place began to diminish. The business grew from that time on.

To make a long story short, Mulloy now has a large factory devoted to the grasshopper canning industry. He receives daily shipments from neighboring localities and is planning to establish agencies in all parts of North and South America for the collection of the raw product and the distribution of it when finished.

He has perfected several ways by which grasshopper meat can be prepared for human consumption. One process treats the raw product in such a way that all hard, stiff or bony parts of the insect are softened; then the whole is seasoned and pressed into cakes. Another grasshopper food product is made by frying them crisp like French fried potatoes. These are sealed in air-tight packages and sold under the name of "hopper-crisps."

The most delicious of Mulloy's novel products is said to be the grasshopper preserves, which are made by boiling the insects down thick in molasses. In flavor grasshoppers resemble a mixture of raw tomato and cheese with a dash of pepper. They chew like crab meat.

Mulloy is able to produce his products very cheaply owing to the negligible cost of the raw material and his use of child labor. They retail for 10 cents a pound, pressed or fried, and for 15 cents a can, preserved. Food experts testify that they are rich in nourishment, being 85.4 per cent proteid, 10.68 per cent carbohydrate, and 2 per cent fat.

Foiled in the Attempt.

Brown had been saying that the pickpocket scare was nothing more than a lot of panicky exaggeration, and that a man, if only he were sensible and moderately careful, had very little to fear from the light-fingered fraternity while walking through the streets, says Tit-Bits.

"I'm not so sure," said Jones. "Why only yesterday one of those beggars tried to pick my pocket, but, happily, my wife prevented him stealing a penny-piece."

"Oh," said Brown, becoming interested, "that was jolly smart of her! What did she do—grab him, or merely scream?"

"Neither," replied Jones; "as a matter of fact she wasn't with me at the time."

"Wasn't with you! What do you mean?"

"My dear chap," sighed Jones, "you wait till you get married, then you may learn what an advantage it is to have a wife who goes through your pockets every night."

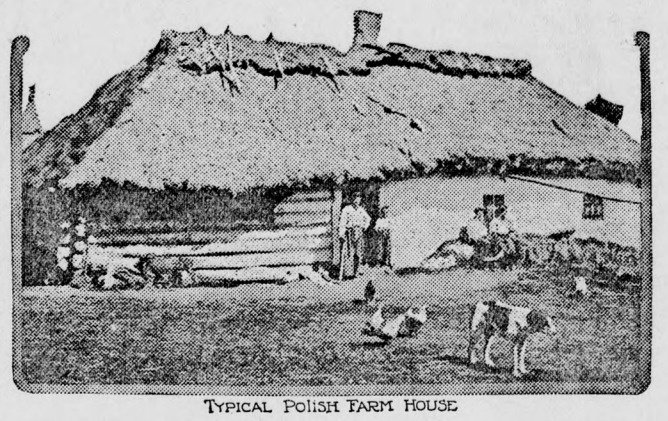
Burns Inconsistent in Love.

Burns' love affairs were both the product and the inspiration of his genius, says the London Telegraph. Although he had written to Clarinda of Edinburgh that, compared with her, Jean Armour was as the expiring glimmer of a farthing taper beside the glory of the meridian sun, he married Jean within two months. Last year at Sotheby's a letter written a week after his marriage, vindicating Jean entirely, fetched $550. A few days ago a curious Burns letter was offered dated June 26, 1788 (Burns was married August 3, 1788), in which he states: "I have waited on Mr. Auld about my marriage affair and stated that I was legally fined for an irregular marriage by a justice of the peace. He says if I bring an attestation of this by the two witnesses there shall be no more litigation about it." The "legal" marriage which followed August 3 was apparently the solution of the trouble. Doubts raised in the auction room as to the authenticity of the letter were dispelled.

Imagination.

Imagination is often useful as at times when you must give your wife an account of how you spent last evening. If you have imagination you will immediately think of some clever and original reply, such as, "I was sitting up with a sick friend." Some people have no imagination at all and get into a way of telling the truth about everything, which of course makes them very disagreeable companions. There have been people with much imagination, but few with enough to see any charm in other people's children. Of course, if you have too much imagination you may be given free board and room by the state, a pleasant life, free from care, but rather confining.—Detroit Journal.

Poland of Today



TYPICAL POLISH FARM HOUSE

"NIECH bendzie pochevalowy Jesus Chrystus" (Blessed be the Lord Jesus Christ). "Na wieki wiekow" (for ages and ages). Thus one Polish peasant greets another, as his ancestors have done for centuries, writes Nevin O. Winter in the Christian Herald. This quaint salutation is heard everywhere in the Polish section of Austria, Germany and Russia, the peasant always removing his hat in a truly gracious way as he thus greets a noble or a stranger. It is one of the surface indications of the deep religious instinct that seems to be inborn with the Slavic races, and that is found among both Russians and Poles. Devotion to the church of their choice reaches a degree for which it is difficult to find analogies in the new world.

The events now taking place in Europe may result in a realignment of Poland, if not in a re-establishment of her national sovereignty. Independence in a limited degree has been promised by both Russia and Germany. Whatever may be the outcome of the titanic struggle now taking place, the allegiance of at least a part of the Poles is very likely to be transferred to another overlord if the dream of another Poland, so long cherished in the Polish breast, fail of realization. Our sympathies must go out to these downtrodden people, who are so proud of their own ideals. It is only in the Austrian province of Galicia, where so much fighting has taken place, that the Poles have been allowed to breathe freely, speak their own language without fear, and openly educate their children in their beloved tongue. Polish peasants do not shine intellectually, since there has been little opportunity to develop the intellect. But, for that matter, what peasant does? The most of them are not even able to read or write.

Superior to Russian Brother.

As a consequence, the Polish peasant impresses one as being rather slow in both thought and action. But he is not so slow as the Russian peasant, and he has more independence of thought and action than his Slavic brother. This quality sometimes approaches unruliness, a characteristic that, at times, has led Poles into conflict with authorities in the United States, as well as with their own clerical authorities. It has also resulted in the formation of a number of independent Polish Catholic churches on this side of the Atlantic.

The Polish peasant is essentially a tiller of the soil. This has been his occupation during all the preceding generations, and it still continues to be the height of his ambition. His talk is of agriculture, and most of his joys are connected with the different seasons. Most of his food is raised in his own garden or fields. Potatoes are a great staple, and cabbages are almost as important. Beans, corn and beets add to the larder. Cabbages are much used in making the thick soups so well liked, and a soup is also made of red beets. In summer his costume is simple, consisting only of thin shirt and trousers; but in winter a padded sheepskin coat, with the wool turned inside, is added. To the bare feet are added coarse boots, and to the bare head a hat.

"Do the women do the work of section hands here?" I asked of a fellow traveler as our train was approaching Lemberg, which has been the objective of contending forces so frequently.

Women Inured to Hard Labor.

"Yes," he answered, "and they do it exceedingly well." It was only another evidence that the lot of the Polish woman is especially hard. This is noticeable throughout all the Polish provinces of the three dominant countries. They do more than their full share of the family work. The Polish woman of the lower classes has not yet emerged from the physical and mental slavery of former ages. Sometimes one will see more women in the field than men, and a kaleidoscopic effect of color is then visible. Blue, green, yellow, gold, and silver are mingled in various combinations. They pin up the overskirt, which leaves a bright petticoat exposed to view.

At Cracow I have seen these women carry mortar for the masons and plasterers, where new buildings were being erected. They were spading up the flower-beds in the parks, and were doing the work as well as the masculine overseer could have done it himself. They can hang paper or paint a house. Along the roads women would be seen carrying heavy bundles, or pushing loaded wheelbarrows. Everywhere they are doing work that involves considerable physical strength. Hence it is that many of these Polish women look haggard and old even before they have passed the third decade of life. This is more true than ever at the present time, for the men are in the armies, frequently fighting each other, because they cannot help themselves. It is no wonder that a girl naturally attractive soon grows old and haggard. Hard work with little pleasure, and the care of a family, which is generally large, must inevitably leave their mark before many years.

Picturesque Marriage Ceremonies.

The marriage day is the one bright spot in the girl's life, since it is made the occasion for festivities, and the ceremony itself is very picturesque. There is music by the peasant musicians, who play their liveliest tunes. The whole village turns out on such occasions. Joy and jollity reign supreme for the day.

The old Polish costumes have disappeared in Russia, but distinctive costumes are still worn. Red or yellow, with alternating green stripes, is most common. The men wear baggy trousers made of the same material as the skirts of the women. In one district, west of Warsaw, every peasant seemed to wear this costume. Some were working in the fields, others walking or driving along the highway. The children looked like little grandfathers or grandmothers, being dressed in exactly the same styles as their elders. The peasants dwell in the quaint villages which are scattered everywhere throughout Poland. The villages of Galicia are especially interesting on Sundays and holidays, when the national costumes are donned. The cottages are generally made of stone or boards plastered over, and are then covered with a coat of whitewash. The straw roof is frequently crowned with green-growing moss which adds to its picturesque appearance, if not to its healthfulness. Water is drawn from the wells by a long pole balanced near the center. These wells have a decided old-world appearance. The interior of the cottages is usually divided into two rooms. In one room the entire family live, eat and sleep; in the other, in more or less harmonious contentment, dwell the cows, pigs, chickens and geese. No household would be complete without a number of geese. Around the cottages a number of children are sure to be seen playing. A dozen or 20 or 30 of such cottages, each separated only by a small yard, make up a village. If there is a marriageable daughter in the house, the lintel of the door and the window surroundings are ornamented with little irregular hands, which is a notice to marriageable young men.

Bird Life in Alaska.

Persons with a fancy for ornithology may be interested in the fact that Alaska has few birds in winter aside from grouse and the innumerable flocks of ptarmigan to be found throughout the territory. These latter are numerous at all seasons, but are to be found only at high altitudes in summer. Geese are to be seen by the million from late June to October, but seldom later. Ducks are fully as plentiful, but with the coming of fall they also migrate South. For some reason an occasional duck winters in Alaska, but a goose never. Most of the birds which nest north of the circle spend the rest of the year in South America, some, like the Alaska nighthawk, going so far as the Argentine, while the tern is not satisfied until he reaches the Antarctic regions. This means that most Alaskan birds travel annually, coming and going, from 14,000 to 20,000 miles, not counting the distance covered in side trips for food and other purposes while on the way. From the middle of May until the first of July the birds return to Alaska in countless myriads, those which travel both day and night arriving first, while the observers of union hours who fly exclusively on either day or night shifts, come straggling in a few weeks later.

Russia Turns to America.

The British acting consul general at Odessa reports a statement in the Russkoe Slovo (Moscow), to the effect that the Russian minister of agriculture, when introducing his departmental estimates in the duma, stated that the lack of labor was making itself severely felt and that the use of implements and machinery for agricultural purposes in Russia must be largely extended. The department of agriculture, therefore, proposed to give large orders to American firms.

Thought Choate a Footman.

When Joseph H. Choate was Ambassador to the Court of St. James he was standing near the door as some of the guests at the reception were leaving. An Englishman, mistaking him for one the footman, said:

"Call me carriage."

Mr. Choate turned to him and said: "How do you do, Carriage?"

"Why do you call me that?" demanded the astonished Englishman.

"Well," responded Mr. Choate, dryly, "I couldn't very well call you Hansome."—Ladies' Home Journal.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.—Adv.

Give Them Music.

Youth craves music and light and laughter. The tactful mother can supply all these at home. But if she frowns on too much company, the talking machine makes her head ache, and she is going to have company on the evening her growing son and daughter wish to entertain friends, soon she will find herself alone evenings with no young laughter to bother her (or her friends) if they call.—New York Evening Telegram.

LISTEN TO THIS! SAYS CORNS LIFT RIGHT OUT NOW

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.—Adv.

Enemy Precaution.

"I saw a very patriotic act by a dog as I was going home yesterday."

"What was it?"

"We were passing through the market, when I saw a French bull seize and intern a German sausage."

"So you were invited to participate in a profit-sharing scheme?"

"Yes."

"How did you come out?"

"I discovered that the purpose of the scheme was not sharing, but shearing."

Don't Let Skin Trouble Spoil Your Good Time

"I can't have any fun! I am such a sight with this eczema that people avoid me wherever I go. And the itching torments me so that I don't get any peace, anyhow."

Don't be discouraged! Even in severe, well-established cases of eczema, or similar skin-troubles, Resinol Ointment, aided by Resinol Soap, usually relieves the itching at once and quickly clears the eruption away. All druggists sell Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. Try them.—Adv.

Wasted Power.

Through a long course of legislative fatuousness our country has lost millions of dollars in wasted power, and stands to lose many millions more unless the present situation is remedied. The fundamental economic principle about hydraulic power is that every cubic foot of water that plunges downward unutilized, is a sheer waste of inherent national wealth. If you do not dig up your coal or cut down your wood its fuel value remains, while in the case of unusual water powers, the water of the present runs to absolute waste. The thing of vital importance to the country at the present time is that all the sources of hydraulic power, which are economically available, should be brought quickly into use so as to give modern industry a fair chance. The water which is not used today is lost capital. We need water power legislation which shall give encouragement toward the immediate development of every horse power worth the while, with provision to protect the government in its ownership, if you like, by regulation of prices and by limitation of charter rights, but still constructive instead of destructive as at present. The electro-chemical industries need more power at Niagara and legislators should see to it that these great industries are taken care of.—Metallurgical and Chemical Engineering.

Women in Secret Warfare

By LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

I want to give to others hope and faith,
I want to do all that the Master saith,
I want to live aright from day to day;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

Who is it that says that women know little or nothing of the tactics of war?

Why, there isn't one of Eve's daughters who isn't engaged in secret warfare from the cradle to the grave. Widows are generals in love's warfare; maidens are volunteers; married women are life enlisters. From the time they wore pinafores, they have battled with each other over their playthings. Soon as their dresses were let down ankle-length the young women were engaged in polite warfare over their beaux. Mothers skirmished valiantly, engaging in royal secret battles to best each other in securing the man so many coveted for a son-in-law. A secret battle has waged among the social climbers. They employ every known tactic to further their interest.

There are secret and bitter wars going on between mothers and girls who want to marry their sons. Other wars are going on to keep daughters from marrying men who haven't been able to wedge their way into the good graces of the mothers. There are household warfares where the half-dozen girls refuse bitterly to be kept back to give the eldest daughter a chance.

Secret warfares go on against the innocent widows who are willing to marry the other woman's rich brother or uncle who is doing his best toward sister or niece to help bring up her family. There's warfare on the stage when the public sees more talent and beauty in one star than the other. You didn't suppose the defeated candidate for stage honors was joyous over the other's success, did you? Thus it is through every walk in life; in every community there are women who are at secret warfare over one thing or another. More often than not, it's war between husband and wife over money matters. Jealousy is not lacking as a favorite cause. It will therefore be seen that women are well up in every stage of warfare. They have been all through its skirmishes, its defeats and its victories. They are natural-born warriors.

Once in a while we hear of a valiant, feminine soldier cutting and lashing with her tongue, if she has no other weapon. Women are the first, however, to sue for peace and appreciate it. Let no one worry hereafter as to what women would do in case of war. Trust them to grope their way to victory. Bless their dear hearts, they're used to it. They don't have much to say about it, but if occasion demands they'll defend those they love at all hazards.

Divers Who Work on Bottom Of the Sea Must Be Willing To Confront Many Dangers

Arthur P. Mayfield of the United States navy was honor man of the first class to be "graduated" by the deep sea diving school started by the navy department. Here is how it feels to go down to the floor of the ocean with life dependent on a slender hose, as related by Mr. Mayfield, according to the Kansas City Times:

"When they let you down from the side of a boat into deep water, the first impression is like going out of a brilliantly lighted room into a dark one, for your eyes are slow in getting accustomed to the gloom. After a while you begin to see the phosphorus in the water, and that helps a bit, and later when you are used to the difference, you find that you can see things dimly by means of the light that has filtered down from above. However, that is not enough to work by. You take an electric light for that purpose.

"By the time you get down around ninety feet the oxygen supplied through your air hose gets in its work, and you feel wonderfully exhilarated—it's almost like having a 'jag' on. You descend gradually, and the feeling of exhilaration wears off a bit, and then you begin to realize the dangers about you.

"There are all kinds of dangers. First there is the danger of carbon dioxide poisoning, which hits a man if he doesn't regulate his air supply properly and breathes vitiated air over again. It's just like being in a closed room without any ventilation. The air pressure is regulated to some extent from above, but you have got to do most of the regulating yourself by means of the valve in your diving suit. Then, at great depths, when the pressure is half a dozen or more atmospheres, there is danger from oxygen poisoning, and this is extremely hard to overcome.

"Contrary to the general belief, there is little danger from the sharks or other big dwellers down in deep water, for they are afraid of divers. You see, the air rushes out of the diver's suit with a shrill, whistling sound; he carries an electric light, and his looks are enough to frighten off worse things than sharks.

"A diver stays down from twenty to twenty-five minutes, on an average. It would be dangerous to stay down too long, for in addition to the chance of being poisoned, there is the cold to be reckoned with, to say nothing of the tremendous pressure."

Bits of Science.

Sixteen to eighteen a minute should be the regular number of inspirations in a healthy adult.

That there are airquakes, caused by the explosion of meteors in the atmosphere and entirely independent of earthquakes, is a theory advanced by an eminent English astronomer.

Cancer has been traced to roaches by a Danish scientist who has succeeded in producing the disease in rats by feeding them with eggs of parasites that infest the insects.

Milk has been found to be a better cutting lubricant than oil in a Chicago gear factory that is manufacturing blind nuts out of a soft machine steel.

A centrifugal pump directly connected with an electric motor that runs equally well either in or out of water has been invented by an Englishman.

To protect the contents of store windows from burglars, a Chicago inventor has patented a metal curtain which drops simultaneously with the breaking of the glass.

POULTRY POINTERS

Geese wash their food down with lots of water. Give them plenty, and have it always good and fresh.

Folks use onions to ward off colds. Just exactly as good for hens. Chop them fine and mix with other feed.

Take a bit of time and wipe off the windows of the houses. Hens like a nice light home as well as you do.

Some of the commercial egg producers are fine, but with the best of them must go good care and kindly treatment.

Remember that the turkey is a great meat eater, and keep that part of the food supply up.

Fancy fixings add nothing to efficiency. Good, substantial things are all the hens demand for the furnishings of their houses.

Have you ever thought that hens prefer dark nests in which to do their laying? It is so.

Hot food should never be given the fowls, though warm food is appetizing and sometimes helpful during cold weather.

We do not advise the use of pepper and other spices in poultry foods, for they are likely to injure the digestive organs of the fowls.

During cold weather, fowls can eat more corn with advantage than they can during warmer weather, because corn furnishes considerable of the heat-making elements of food.

Want to Measure the Baby's Horse Power? Here's the Way

Dr. John R. Murlin of Cornell University Medical college has devised an apparatus which causes a baby to record its horse power, says Popular Science Monthly. Horse power is used in this sense merely as the expression of a unit of energy.

A baby unconsciously writes the story of its energy by means of its pulse and its breathing. A small cuff is attached to the left leg of the infant above the knee. From this cuff a tube leads to a glass connection, passing through the wall of the incubator and finally to a T-tube on the top of the incubator. One limb of this tube passes to an air-pump and the other to another T-tube. To the second T-tube a mercury pressure gauge (manometer) is connected by one limb and a pressure-bottle to the other. From this bottle a transmission-tube leads to a recording drum. Thus with each pulse the baby makes a record.

Oddly enough, the fattest baby produced the smallest degree of horse power. While sleeping the babies produced an average of .004 of a horse power. It was determined that the normal heat production of recently fed, sleeping babies between two months and one year of age is .09 horse power.

The girl who is wise never gives a young man a lock of her hair. She may decide to change the color of it later.

Women of Middle Age

Here is Proof by Women who Know.

Lowell, Mass.—"For the last three years I have been troubled with the Change of Life and the bad feelings common at that time. I was in a very nervous condition, with headaches and pain a good deal of the time so I was unfit to do my work. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it has helped me in every way. I am not nearly so nervous, no headache or pain. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy any sick woman can take."—Mrs. Margaret Quinn, Rear 259 Worthen St., Lowell, Mass.

North Haven, Conn.—"When I was 45 I had the Change of Life which is a trouble all women have. At first it didn't bother me but after a while I got bearing down pains. I called in doctors who told me to try different things but they did not cure my pains. One day my husband came home and said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash?' Well, I got them and took about 10 bottles of Vegetable Compound and could feel myself regaining my health. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good. Any one coming to my house who suffers from female troubles or Change of Life, I tell them to take the Pinkham remedies. There are about 20 of us here who think the world of them."—Mrs. Florence Isella, Box 197, North Haven, Conn.

Boat Has Wings.

The latest development in racing motorboats is a craft capable of making from 60 to 80 miles an hour and equipped with wings that are designed to catch the water just as the wings of an aeroplane catch the air. This boat is 19 feet 9 inches long and 12 feet wide over all, each of the wings being 3 feet wide and the hull 6 feet wide. It is equipped with a 250 horsepower racing engine which ordinarily runs at 1,500 revolutions a minute and drives the propeller at 2,250 revolutions a minute, or one and a half times its own speed. One of the novel features of the boat is that the rudder is at the bow, while the helmsman sits at the stern. With this arrangement the boat is easily handled at any speed, one effect of the bow rudder being that the boat, in making a turn, has a tendency to pivot around the rudder. A picture of this unusual craft is published in the October Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Poor John!

"Hello! Is this you, mother dear?"

"Yes, Sue. What is it? Something awful must have happened for you to call me up at this——"

"It's not so awful. But John, dear, hasn't been feeling well and the doctor gave him pills to take every four hours. I've been sitting up to give them to him, and now it's about time for his medicine, but John has fallen asleep. Should I wake him?"

"I wouldn't if I were you. What is he suffering from?"

"Insomnia."—Pittsburg Telegraph.

Grand Historical Pageant at San Jose

San Jose, May 17: "Spead Pageant Week in San Jose" is the slogan that the citizens of San Jose and Santa Clara valley have adopted and thousands of letters are being sent all over the state urging people to come to San Jose and witness the great outdoor dramatic pageant of the history of the state and by so doing assist the humanitarian work of the Red Cross. The Pageant will be staged at Luna Park Friday and Saturday, June 1 and 2.

The Native Sons and Daughters parlors of the county have combined to ensure the success of the historical episodes of the play notably those scenes relating to the Bear Flag incident, the Admission of the state to the Union and the raising of the flag at Monterey. Every son and daughter parlor in the state has been officially notified of the great Pageant and asked to send representatives to witness the production. Those parlors sending visitors to this city will be welcomed by the local parlors and entertained.

Governor Stephens has been extended a special invitation to attend the great production and witness the scene among others that will show the inauguration of Peter Burnett as first Governor of the state. Mayor James Rolph of San Francisco, Mayor Davie of Oakland, and the Mayors of Los Angeles, Fresno, Sacramento and Stockton and many others of the large cities of the state have also been invited to come to the great play and be guests of San Jose for the week-end.

The automobile dealers of Santa Clara county have combined with the Pageant to help boost its success for the Red Cross and are now busy carrying on a campaign for securing the cooperation of auto owners to make this city the objective point for the week-end trip of June 1, 2 and 3.

Dropped Another

In what the natives of Santa Cruz called the best exhibition of the national pastime witnessed there this season, our Athletics were defeated in that city last Sunday by the close score of 5 to 4.

Our boys drew first blood in the 3rd frame when, with two down, Purdy walked, and scored on Bradbury's double to right. The enemy came back in the 4th and tied it up. We took the lead again for a moment in the 5th when Stevens hit to center for the second sack. Rhyne sacrificed, Purdy also laid one down and Stevens crossed the pan. Bradbury drew a walk and Ross flied out to 3rd for a third out. A double, single, sacrifice and error netted Santa Cruz 2 runs in their half, making the score 3-2, as it remained until the 9th.

In the 9th Stevens shot one to 3rd that Arellanes mussed up and he was safe. Rhyne sacrificed him to 3rd. Purdy doubled to left, scoring Stevens, and stole third. Bradbury walked and stole 2nd. Ross fanned; Lennon was hit by a pitched ball and the bases were jammed. On a fielders's choice Paull reached first, Bradbury and Lennon moving up one, and Purdy scoring, Umpire Sandow called three on Pierce that were high and wide and our side was retired.

Santa Cruz come up fighting. Speaker doubled to left center. Coleman walked, and both scored when Arellanes passed one to Purdy that was not handled. This broke up the ball game 5-4 in favor Santa Cruz. Next Sunday the Athletics play at Los Gatos.

Miss Leitch of Oakdale visited the J. D. Sawyer family this week. Roy Sawyer took her home by auto yesterday.

The grammar school trustees at their meeting Saturday evening re-elected the present corps of teachers, W. B. Kammerer, principal, Miss Matie Sawyer, Miss Minnie Atkinson, Miss Phebe Farley and Miss Mabel Thompson.

Don't forget to call at the Bank of Campbell for that Red Cross Benefit ticket. Gentlemen 50 cents, ladies and children, 25 cents. Campbell has been allotted 100 tickets. Surely these will be sold because Campbell always handles this kind of a cause in the right way. Get yours NOW.

I Am The Flag

I a the the Flag!

My Red is for the blood of Free men, shed that their children and children's children might be free—not for the screaming of Anarchism.

My White is for the purity of ideals, for the preservation of which a hundred million people stand responsible—not for the White Feather.

I was conceived in Liberty, nourished on Freedom and dedicated to the great causes of Humanity.

Clinging to my folds are the people of the whole world, who have come to me from their native lands to find better things—and they have found better things.

I have been torn to shreds, ripped by the storms of adversity, shot at and shelled, but I am still here—still a symbol of honor, of hope, of liberty.

Am I worth preserving?

I am the flag!

CAMPBELL'S FAME is growing. Last week a prominent business man of San Jose was in Campbell looking for a suitable home for his family, which was natural; he wanted a home where the surroundings were congenial and pleasant, which was commendable; he wanted a home where the water and sunshine were the best made, which was wise. He can find all these at Campbell, but the one big attraction which is drawing that man to our midst is the high standard of our high school and the moral environment of the community. This gentleman has boys ready to enter the High school and the excellent reputation of this school has reached him, hence his decision.

WHY SHOULD wheat and flour be so prohibitively high? The president of the Chicago Board of Trade says that there is plenty of wheat in the country to last till after harvest. Some of the country's traitors, the food speculators, have siezed upon this war scare idea for the purpose of getting rich in a single deal. It would seem a good plan for Uncle Sam to take over these few food articles, allowing a fair profit on the purchase price and kick the non-producing leeches out of bnsiness or better still put them to work raising beans and corn.

BOYS AND GIRLS going to and from school should refrain from the needless destruction of the food products this year of all years. A number of children have been seen pulling apricots from the trees along their way and throwing them. Food is food these days and these apricots carelessly pulled will greatly add to the grand total at harvest time. Bear this in mind and remind your less responsible schoolmate of his duty to his country as well as his respect for the rights and property of others.

THE biggest step toward conservation this country has ever taken was the vote of the senate to stop the waste of food grains in making liquors. Some conservation worth conversation that: conserve the food, conserve mankind. Can you beat it?

Geo Parso and A. E. Sargent will go to Pacific Grove Saturday, for a visit with A. S. Collins and to enjoy a bit of sea-fishing.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Watrous motored to Berkeley Sunday. Mrs. I. P. Beal accompanied them as far as Oakland where she spent the day with a sister who is seriously ill.

Prof. Jan Kalas, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Bozena, furnished two 'cello numbers for the musical program at the Good Cheer Tea held at the Hotel Vendome yesterday afternoon. Mr. Kalas' skill as a 'cellist is becoming widely known thruout the valley and he is quite in demand for entertainments.

Yesterday was annual clean-up day at the Congregational church. The men with hoes and rakes were busy in the yard, and the ladies with scrubbing brushes and cleaning cloths were equally industrious on the inside. A basket lunch was enjoyed at noon by those who spent the day on the job.

The second May Festival will be held in the High school auditorium, the evening of May 25th. It will be a combined program, including numbers by the Glee club, the Orchestra, and scenes illustrating the different periods in the history of the drama. The students are taking a great deal of interest, class spirit moving them to do their share. No admission charge.

Mr. I. W. Snow and Ernest Downing took members of the Physical Geography class to Santa Cruz Saturday, where they visited the Davenport Cement works and examined the hills and terraces along the coast. A picnic dinner was no small feature of the day's program. Those in attendance were, Lois Andrews, Ernest Downing, Marion Everett, Leland Gratton, Emil Mrak, Edwina Page, Leonard Stuart, Oscar Seagren, Miriam Taylor, and Alice Wiesendanger.

Flavors Discussed

Pundita Circle enjoyed a domestic science program at the home of Mrs. C. E. Day in Virginia avenue, "Flavors" being the topic. A lengthy business meeting preceding the program made it impossible to have all the papers read, so cloves, chili pepper, sage, cocoa, and coffee were consigned to another meeting. The papers or talks rendered were; "Flavors" by Mrs. Day, "Ginger and Mustard" by Mrs. Stubbe, "Nutmeg" by Mrs. Corning, "Pepper" by Mrs. Downing, "Cinnamon" by Mrs. Toles, and "Tea" by Mrs. Watrous.

Mrs. Day then demonstrated the cooking of a salad dressing on an electric plate. The hot dressing was poured over sliced new potatoes and eggs. This salad was served with nut graham bread, and oriental punch. The latter being green in color was quite a novelty, and was the quintessence of flavors.

Mrs. Day recently purchased a handsome Edison phonograph. The new patriotic and other records were very pleasing.

Hip Fractured

Mrs. Althea Griffen was found in a helpless condition on the Southern Pacific tracks at Sunnyside avenue Monday afternoon by J. A. Thom. Dr. Merrill was summoned and took the patient to the county hospital for treatment. An X-ray examination disclosed a badly fractured hip. The accident was caused by a fall while Mrs. Griffen was cutting grass for her chickens. Mr. Thom attracted by her cries removed her from the track when the passenger train was only a short distance away.

The tracture was reduced and the patient brought home Wednesday. She will be cared for by her niece, Mrs. Gerken. Mrs. Lent, a sister is here from Edenvale for a short time.

Methodist Church Notes

Take the car at 9:30 Saturday morning for the Sunday-school picnic at Congress Springs. Bring your lunch and cups. The committee will furnish coffee. Round trip 25 cents, and children under twelve 15 cents.

As a result of Mr. Quickmire's talk Sunday evening, about forty cards have been signed requesting a Goodwill Bag. The work is worthy of widest support, and we are much pleased with this ready response by our Campbell people.

Mr. Lloyd will speak Sunday morning on "Spiritual Submarines;" and in the evening on "Hidden Talents." Preceding the morning sermon, the pastor will conduct a brief installation service for the new officers of the Epworth League.

Reul; also all other persons unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the real property described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's ownership or any cloud upon plaintiff's title thereto, Defendants)

Action brought in the Superior Court of the state of California, in and for the County of Santa Clara and the Complaint filed in the office of the Clerk of said Santa Clara County.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Julia M. DeRochebrune, Geo. B. McKee, Emilie C. Popp, Gertrude W. Popp, Louis T. Lenzen, Henry J. Lion, Emile M. Lion, Christina A. Miano, Josephine Volk, May Philson, Jos. A. Desimone, Lewis P. Desimone, Anna M. Dougherty, Madeline Cox, Elsie Rhien, Jennie Brown, and Jos G. Reul; also all other persons unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the real property described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's ownership or any cloud upon plaintiff's title thereto, Defendants:

You are hereby directed to appear and answer the complaint in an action, entitled as above, brought against you in the Superior Court, of the State of California, in and for the County of Santa Clara, within ten days after service on you of this summons, if served within this county, or within thirty days if served elsewhere.

The object of the above entitled action is to obtain a judgment and decree of said court that the plaintiff, Charles T. Boots, is the owner in fee, of all that certain real property situate in the City of San Jose, County of Santa Clara, State of California, described as follows, to-wit:

Commencing at a point on the Westerly line of Third Street 2.5 feet Northerly from the dividing line between Lots One (1) and Four (4) of Block One (1), Range Three (3) South of the Base line of the Original Survey of the City of San Jose, California, and running thence Westerly at right angles to Third street and parallel to San Fernando street along the center line of a brick wall 130.78 feet to the Westerly side of a 13 inch brick wall; thence Southerly along the Westerly side of said wall and parallel to Third Street 48.44 feet to a point; thence Westerly and parallel to San Fernando Street 7.06 feet to the line between Lots 3 and 4 of the aforesaid Block and Range; thence along the Westerly line of Lot 4 Southerly 2.5 feet to a point; thence Easterly at right angles and parallel to San Fernando Street 7.06 feet to the corner of a brick wall; thence continuing along the Southerly side of said brick wall 137.84 feet to the Westerly line of Third Street; thence Northerly along the Westerly line of Third Street 50.94 feet to the place of commencement.

And also to obtain the further judgment and decree of said Court that all the adverse claims made by you, or either of you, are wholly without merit and absolutely void; that plaintiff is the owner in fee of said property, and that you, and each of you, be forever barred and restrained from claiming any or asserting any claims of any nature relating to said property, or any part thereof, adverse to the plaintiff; and for all costs herein expended.

And you are hereby notified that unless you so appear and answer as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in said Complaint.

Given under my hand and Seal of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of Santa Clara, this 4th day of April, A.D. 1917.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put togther, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
